- 139 Worship of a Stupa by a group of eight men standing beside it in veneration; the Stupa itself being on a raised quadrangular platform with four pillars of Persepolitan style at the corners, and a flight of steps in front, in the manner of the Sanchi carvings; 11 in. high by 11 in. wide, c. 200 B.C.

The scene depicted is that of the Prince coaxing the elephant from its den when it prostrated itself at his feet in worship, as loth to depart, but is being urged thereto by one of the Brahmans pulling at its tail, 5 in. high by 17½ in. long, c. 300 A.D.
